

PASSING STORM OVER ARLINGTON ROW

by Rod Chase

Aug 2019

The old world Arlington Row cottages in the small rural village of Bibury, situated in the Gloucestershire Cotswolds, are some of the most idyllic homes you will ever lay eyes on.

Built in 1380 as a monastic wool store, they were converted into weavers' cottages in the 17th century. The honey-colored cottages, which are still in use, are among the oldest habitable buildings in all of Britain..
